What is a cookie?

A cookie is a small file of letters and numbers, which is stored on your browser or the hard drive of your device by some websites. Cookies enable a server to identify your device, distinguishing you from the other users of our site and therefore allow us to offer you the best experience possible. Cookies are commonly used on the Internet and do not harm your device’s system.

Cookies contain information which is transferred to your device’s hard drive. In addition, our site may also set ‘session cookies’, which expire when you close your browser and do not retain information about you after they expire.

How does our site use cookies?

Our cookies will collect and store information about your IP address. Our site uses cookies for the following purposes:

- the operation of our site including, for example, cookies to enable you to log into your user account and view your account;
- to remember and store the details of any applications which have been started or completed via the comparison service;
- to remember your details and previous use of our site so we can personalise our content for you and remember your preferences;
- the collection of information about your use of our site, including the server your device is connected to and the browser you use, allowing us to improve how our site works.

Third party websites which are linked from our site are likely to also use cookies. You should check this and the appropriate cookie policy before using them. We have no control and bear no responsibility for the cookies used or placed by any third party site.

We will process any personal data about you we collect using cookies in accordance with our Privacy Policy.

How can I stop cookies and what effect will this have?

You can stop cookies from being deployed on your device by configuring your browser not to accept them. Please refer to your browser's 'help' facility. If cookies are already on your system, you can delete them.

If you do decide to disable the use of cookies, some of our site's functions may not work as intended.

Changes to our cookie policy

We are the owner and operator of the site. We reserve the right to update this Cookies Policy at any time to reflect any changes in our use of cookies. You should check this policy regularly to ensure you understand our current use of cookies.
